

Installing fiber optic cables for home broadband

Overview

The process involves a combination of national infrastructure, local engineering, and property-level setup. The optical network terminal (ONT) is the critical component that converts fiber optic signals into data your devices can use. In this guide, we'll break down the fiber installation process from start to finish and explain key components such as fiber cabinets, flower pods, ducting, and ONT setup. These fiber optic cables, made of glass or plastic, use light pulses instead of electrical signals, enabling high-speed Internet with low latency and reliable Internet services. Unlike cable or DSL, which use your home's existing copper phone or TV lines, fiber internet requires a brand-new, dedicated connection.
