A black, circular, cross-shaped metal component, likely a part of a mechanical assembly, shown against a white background. The component features a central vertical and horizontal crossbar intersecting at a central point. The outer rim is circular with several small, rectangular slots or notches spaced evenly around its circumference. The component is mounted on a central vertical post, which is visible at the bottom. The overall design suggests it might be a part of a larger machine, possibly related to the agricultural equipment mentioned in the text.
